The Moorfield Storey Membership Drive for 50,000 Members

Many friends of the Association and several of its local branches have asked how best they might show their appreciation of President Storey's notable service to the cause, in winning the Louisville Segregation Case before the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Storey's answer is—"DON'T HOLD LAUDATORY MEETINGS. I SHALL FEEL BEST REPAID IF EVERY BRANCH WILL JOIN ENTHUSIASTICALLY IN THE EFFORT TO SECURE 50,000 MEMBERS FOR THE N. A. A. C. P. WE NEED A LARGE MEMBERSHIP TO INSURE THE PERMANENT SUCCESS OF OUR GREAT MOVEMENT AGAINST RACE PREJUDICE."

Every Crisis reader should join the Association.

THE STENOGRAPHERS' INSTITUTE

1227 S. 17th Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Being able to take a message rapidly in shorthand and transcribing it quickly on a typewriter will fit you to be of more service to Uncle Sam than the trench-men. Men and women can help win the War by just knowing how to operate a typewriter.

10,000 STENOGRAPHERS AND TYPEWRITER OPERATORS ARE WANTED AT WASHINGTON, D. C., AT A SALARY OF FROM $1,000 TO $1,200 PER YEAR

Our students are trained to earn high salaries and they get them. Since last September the following have been appointed in the Government Service: Mr. Richard Hill, Jr., Stenographer-Typist Clerk, Salary $1,200 per year; Miss Helen L. Milton, Stenographer-Typist Clerk, Salary approximately $1,200; and Mr. H. H. Hocutt, Typist-Clerk, Salary $1,000—Mr. Hocutt declined the Clerk's position for a $225 per month job at Hog Island. The following are earning large salaries: Miss Gladys K. Hyman, Bank Clerk, Brown & Stevens' Bank; Mrs. S. Z. Jones Fautleroy, Clerk, J. M. Kaupp & Sons, 4th and Vine, Phila. The President of this Institute is advising all women from 18 to 45 years of age to take the postal clerk's examination at the Philadelphia Post Office, 9th and Chestnut Streets, Phila., on March 9th. 8 of our female students are on the eligible list and 40 will take the clerk-examination on that date. Anyone with a good grammar school education can pass the examination without further training. Rev. Duncan will aid anyone from 12 to 1 p. m. Saturdays with any information as to filling out blanks and filing same, gratuitously. Free instructions in Arithmetic for those desiring to take the examination will be given at this Institute from 12 to 1 p. m., Tuesday and Thursday of each week. Students are trained by an experienced Postal Clerk. All students will be trained, free of charge, on the City Distribution Cases, so that they will be able to do the work of an experienced clerk as soon as they are appointed. New classes will organize in shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping and English branches, March 4, 1918.

We have given 1300 colored people, from the South and other places, work as domestics, free of charge. If you desire work in Philadelphia in a clerical or domestic capacity, write us, enclosing references and stamp for reply and our service will be rendered you gratuitously.

EDWARD T. DUNCAN, President.

DELAY.

PERSONS who do not receive their copies of THE CRISIS on time must remember that the present congestion in the mail service is responsible for many delays which we regret more than they.

ADVICE.

WE note with much interest that The Outlook is tendering advice to the new head of Hampton. It would seem that Dr. Gregg must have:

1. Executive ability.
2. Sympathetic understanding of Hampton's philosophy of education.
3. Fundamental appreciation of the social problems of the South.
4. Ability to unite SOUTH and NORTH in the work of finding a solution to these problems.

Far be it from us to question Lyman Abbot's or the Kaiser's knowledge of the plans of God. But in mundane matters like this we venture meekly to suggest that unless the new principal of Hampton adds two more items to the list above his success will be less than we sincerely wish it to be:

5. A knowledge of the present thought and aspirations of the American Negro.

6. Ability to unite not only North and South, but WHITE and BLACK as well, in a solution of present problems which will satisfy both races.

It is precisely because The Outlook and its ilk have persistently refused to consider these two principles that makes The Outlook more responsible for the present defiant attitude of the white South than any other great organ of public opinion.

We note with deep satisfaction that Dr. Gregg's coming to Hampton has already been signalized by the election of the first colored man, Dr. R. R. Moton, to the Board of Trustees. We confidently hope that Dr. Gregg will next seriously consider how far any philosophy of education is justified in denying to Negroes the same training that has fitted him to be principal of Hampton Institute.

CRIME.

STRONG and ever stronger elements among the white Methodists are determined to consummate one of the greatest crimes against the Negro race since slavery. In order to unite the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church South, they are trying to get rid of 350,000 Negro members. Before the war the Methodists, by their meanness, drove a half million of their Negro members out into the wilderness, where they set up their own temples. Then repentant and remorseful, the church rose to its opportunity, damned slavery, spewed out the slave owners, and welcomed the slaves, even as their Master would have done.

To-day, the dry rot of power and numbers and prestige has seized them.

In the name of Christian "unity," Bishops and powerful laymen and strong periodicals are determined to kick 350,000 Negroes out of the church. Every other obstacle to union with the South is settled. Yet the secret conferences proceed. The oiliest of the church hypocrites, led by Zion's Herald, are urging the black "brethren" to "withdraw" before they are thrown out, and offering them thirty pieces of silver in the guise of church property and bishops' robes for their leaders. That body of death, the Methodist Church South, is stretching its lean and blood-stained hands for its pound of black flesh. God! for one modern Sermon to the Pharisees for these "Christians"!

"But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves.

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

"Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous.

"And say, 'If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets.'

"Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets.

"Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers.

"Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?"

OUR PRESIDENT

POLAND? The President loves it. His interest "in everything which concerns it is very deep." Ireland?

It is the apple of the President's eye and he is said to have made "representations" to England concerning "Home Rule." Armenia? How the President's heart bleeds for Armenia! Palestine? The President thanks God for "Jerusalem Delivered." Russia? The Bolsheviki and he are hand in glove fighting for "the undictated development of all peoples." Kamchatka, Fiji, Tasmania, Spitzbergen—all these the President wishes without a shadow of doubt to make "safe for democracy." But twelve million American Negroes?

Silence!

Distance from Washington certainly lends enchantment to Democracy!

THE BLACK MAN AND THE UNIONS.

JAM among the few colored men who have tried conscientiously to bring about understanding and co-operation between American Negroes and the Labor Unions. I have sought to look upon the Sons of Freedom as simply a part of the great mass of the earth's Disinherited, and to realize that world movements which have lifted the lowly in the past and are opening the gates of opportunity to them today are of equal value for all men, white and black, then and now.

I carry on the title page, for instance, of this magazine the Union label, and yet I know, and everyone of my Negro readers knows, that the very fact that this label is there is an advertisement that no Negro's hand is engaged in the printing of this magazine, since the International Typographical Union systematically and deliberately excludes every Negro that it dares from membership, no matter what his qualifications.

Even here, however, and beyond the hurt of mine own, I have always striven to recognize the real cogency of the Union argument. Collective bargaining has, undoubtedly, raised modern labor from something like chattel slavery to the threshold of industrial freedom, and in this advance of labor white and black have shared.

I have tried, therefore, to see a vision of vast union between the laboring forces, particularly in the South, and hoped for no distant day when the black laborer and the white laborer, instead of being used against each other as helpless pawns, should unite to bring real democracy in the South.

On the other hand, the whole scheme of settling the Negro problem, inaugurated by philanthropists and carried out during the last twenty years, has been based upon the idea of playing off black workers against white. That it is essentially a mischievous and dangerous program no sane thinker can deny, but it is peculiarly disheartening to realize that it is the Labor Unions themselves that have given this movement its greatest impulse and that today, at last, in East St. Louis have brought the most unwilling of us to acknowledge that in the present Union movement, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, there is absolutely no hope of justice for an American of Negro descent.

Personally, I have come to this decision reluctantly and in the past have written and spoken little of the closed door of opportunity, shut impudently in the faces of black men by organized white workingmen. I realize that by heredity and century-long lack of opportunity one cannot expect in the laborer that larger sense of justice and duty which we ought to demand of the privileged classes. I have, therefore, inveighed against color discrimination by employers and by the rich and well-to-do, knowing at the same time in silence that it is practically impossible for any colored man or woman to become a boiler maker or book binder, an electrical worker or glass maker, a worker in jewelry or leather, a machinist or metal polisher, a paper maker or piano builder, a plumber or a potter, a printer or a pressman, a telegrapher or a railway trackman, an electrotyper or stove mounter, a textile worker or tile layer, a trunk maker, upholsterer, carpenter, locomotive engineer, switchman, stone cutter, baker, blacksmith, boot and shoemaker, tailor, or any of a dozen other important well-paid employments, without encountering the open determination and unscrupulous opposition of the whole united labor movement of America. That further than this, if he should want to become a painter, mason, carpenter, plasterer, brickmaker or fireman he would be subject to humiliating discriminations by his fellow Union workers and be deprived of work at every possible opportunity, even in defiance of their own Union laws. If, braving this outrageous attitude of the Unions, he succeeds in some small establishment or at some exceptional time at gaining employment, he must be labeled as a "scab" throughout the length and breadth of the land and written down as one who, for his selfish advantage, seeks to overthrow the labor uplift of a century.

HE recent convention of the American Federation of Labor, at Buffalo, is no proof of change of heart. Grudgingly, unwillingly, almost insultingly, this Federation yields to us inch by inch the status of half-a-man, denying and withholding every privilege it dares at all times.

EDUCATION.

THE campaign to curtail Negro education proceeds apace. Negroes form a third of the population of the District of Columbia and forty-one per cent of the drafted men actually sent to camp from the District are colored. Yet the Board of Education assigned less than twenty-four per cent of the appropriations asked for buildings and grounds to Negroes, and the Board of Commissioners has cut this down and is asking Congress to appropriate to Negroes only ten per cent of the total to be assigned. Shame on this Government. WRITE YOUR CONGRESSMAN TO-DAY AND PROTEST.

COLONEL YOUNG.

*Headquarters Punitive Expedition,
U. S. Army; Colonia Dublan,
Mexico, August 21, 1916*

FROM: The Commanding General,
To: The Adjutant General of the Army (through Military Channels).

Subject: Recommendation of officers to command militia in federal service.

1. In view of the proposed detail of colonels from the line of the regular army to command brigades of militia in federal service, I would invite the attention of the War Department to the following named officers of this expedition whose general qualifications, and whose efficiency and devotion to duty, as shown while serving here in Mexico, entitle them to full consideration in connection with such detail.

The officers mentioned are active, energetic, and able. Should circumstances make it practicable to spare them from this expedition, they would do credit to themselves and the service, and would leave a favorable impression on the militia as to the ability and military efficiency of the regular army.

2. Of lieutenants, colonels, and majors who have rendered highly important and efficient service, the following are recommended, should selection for duty with militia in federal service be made from these grades.

Those who have shown very high efficiency throughout the campaign:

.....

Major Charles Young, 10th Cavalry.

JOHN J. PERSHING,

Brigadier General, U. S. Army.

Presumably, in consequence of the above letter, Colonel Young has been ordered to Ohio TO SIT STILL AND DO NOTHING!

THE RAND SCHOOL.

WE want to recommend to our readers the Rand School of Social Science in New York City. It teaches History, Economics, and Socialism in modernwise. It is hampered by no traditions, but is radical in its honest search for truth. Above all, it extends "a genuine welcome to colored men and women."

CIVIL SERVICE.

THERE is gross discrimination in the Civil Service at Washington against colored people. This Association has secured justice in several cases, but the discrimination goes on. We are glad, however, to publish the following official statement from the President of The Civil Service Commission:

"In reply to your letter of October 17, the Commission informs you that its examinations are open to all American citizens who are qualified under the terms of the announcements, without regard to race. This Commission has never knowingly been guilty of discrimination against colored citizens."

National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

JOHN R. SHILLADY, the new Secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., was born in Ireland in 1875. He has had long experience in social work and comes to us from the Department of Charities and Corrections, Westchester County, New York.

WALTER F. WHITE, our new Assistant Secretary, is a young colored man, twenty-four years of age. He has been cashier of the Standard Life Insurance Company and the very efficient secretary of our Atlanta branch.

THE MOORFIELD STOREY DRIVE FOR FIFTY THOUSAND MEMBERS.

AT the midwinter conference in New York, every delegate was eager to show his gratitude and that of his branch to Mr. Moorfield Storey, the Association's honored President. Mr. Storey's notable service to the great cause for which the National Association stands was full warrant for this grateful feeling. The Segregation Decision is indeed a landmark in the battle against race discrimination.

Many have asked how best can the members of the Association express their appreciation of Mr. Storey's achievement and adequately celebrate this great victory. Some members and several branches wished to tender to Mr. Storey a public dinner or a testimonial meeting; but obviously this cannot be done in ninety places at which Mr. Storey could be present in person. Mr. Storey has let it be known that the kind of tribute he would most appreciate would be a determined drive for a membership large enough to make the Association a greater power throughout the nation. The National Association, therefore, transmits to every branch Mr. Storey's appeal for 50,000 members by May 1, 1918. Mr. Storey says:

"Do not hold laudatory meetings. I shall feel best repaid if every branch will join enthusiastically in the effort to secure 50,000 members for the N. A. A. C. P. We need a large membership to insure the permanent success of our great movement against race prejudice."

On December 31, 1917, the Association had 9,282 members; 8,436 of these were branch memberships, the remainder memberships at large. An organization weak in numbers and support may safely be ignored and flouted by hostile adversaries or self-seeking politicians. To stem the tide of prejudice and rally the liberal and fair-minded forces of the nation and of the locality to the defense of the rights of the colored people, the Association must be strong in numbers and in financial resources. At this time, when the nation's accredited spokesmen have announced their declared purpose in the great war to be that of establishing the rights of weaker and oppressed peoples everywhere to self-determination and to the free exercise of all those great principles of democracy for which this nation was founded, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has an unparalleled opportunity to proclaim the right of colored Americans throughout the length and breadth of the land to enjoy all the rights and privileges of American citizenship, free from race discrimination and color prejudice.

But, as every unprejudiced American will be forced to admit, these elemental rights of citizenship must still be fought for by every weapon of agitation, publicity and legal defense which the National Association can wield. Fifty thousand members in local branches throughout the nation will give the Association's efforts most effective backing. At the same time, every branch, by getting behind this great membership drive, can tender to Mr. Storey the kind of tribute that will most appeal to him.

It will be realized at once that to secure 50,000 members by May 1 there must be first, the determination to win; second, thorough preparatory organization, and third, coordinated team work.

The National Office, under the leadership of the new Secretary, Mr. John R. Shillady, and of the Field Secretary, Mr. Johnson, has given much thought to ways and means of accomplishing this result. The plan of campaign adopted follows the lines of the successful drives for large memberships and contributions made by the American Red Cross, the Young Men's Christian Association, and similar successful organizations, and is therefore based on experience. No plan, however, is perfect nor adapted to every situation. The Secretaries will welcome suggestions of any kind from the branches. They have no pride of opinion. The National Office desires only to help the branches "go over the top."

The National Office will give the branches all the help that is within its power. A supply of membership blanks telling "Why You Should Enlist in the Ranks of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People" will be mailed to all branches. Additional literature will be sent on request. The Secretaries will plan to visit during the campaign as many of the centers in which branches are located as possible; they would like to visit all branches but this may prove to be impossible.

A careful outline of the campaign has been adopted and will be published in the Branch Bulletin.

All persons interested should write to the National Office, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York City, immediately for these details.

If you have no branch in your city and wish to organize one and take part in this drive, kindly let us hear from you.

THINGS are produced and distributed either for use or for the purpose of making profit. The man who owns a cow and produces milk for his family consumption represents the first purpose. The men who produce milk to sell to somebody else to sell to the consumer represent the second purpose. The great mass of business is based on this latter method. Things are produced and distributed, men go into business, factories and mines are operated, and people are given employment, not for the useful purpose of serving human needs, but for the purpose of making profits.

There is one group of people who have deliberately set themselves to the task of taking for themselves all of this profit of trade and, thereby, ultimately eliminating it. This they are proceeding to do, not in the competitive sense of business, but through a movement so wide and democratic that it invites all the people of the world to join it, irrespective of race, religion, occupation, or social standing.

Profit-making business desires monopoly. It does not want everybody going into business. It requires, on one hand, the exploited worker who is paid less than the wealth he produces; and, on the other hand, the exploited consumer who gets less than he pays for. These are the fundamental requirements of competitive business. The Co-operative Movement does not demand an exploited class. It desires that all should join it. The more who join, the greater is the success. This is because its purpose is to substitute co-operation and mutual aid for competition and antagonism.

If we cast our eyes over the field of human interests we find one thing which is common to all human beings—a necessity upon which their lives depend. They differ in religion, occupation, productivity and habits of life, but all are consumers. All things of use should have for their ultimate destiny to be consumed—to go into the elements of society to nourish, sustain, develop, beautify. Food, housing, clothing, music, art, recreations, and learning are the great fundamental needs. The farmer, the carpenter, the shoemaker, the musician, the artist, the dramatist, the teacher, are all necessary producers of things which the consumer needs. The merchant, the advertiser, the real-estate agent, the broker, the jailer, the banker, most lawyers and courts, the idle rich, and all the horde of clerks and parasites which these employ are not needed in co-operation. If those who are occupied in unnecessary functions were employed in useful service, the hours of labor of those who toil could be reduced one-half; and if the labor-saving devices which are possible were put into use, the hours of labor could be reduced to one-fourth of what they now are. The profit system imposes this unnecessary burden upon mankind.

Co-operation is simple. It requires only loyalty and friendship toward one's fellow-men. A group of people who are capable of fidelity organize as a consumers' society to supply for themselves their simplest wants. They buy at wholesale in common such things as eggs, butter, fruit, vegetables, coal, meat, and coffee. They take for themselves the profit which had previously gone to the private merchant. Their society grows larger, and presently they run their own store, and distribute to themselves all of their food-stuffs, clothing, and household goods.

The basis of such an organization must be democratic. The necessary share-capital must be raised, preferably by the one-member-one-share principle. One member, one vote; interest not above the current or legal rate; and returns to members based on the volume of purchases which each member makes, are the essentials of success.

When the number of such societies has increased they will find that the total amount of purchases they are making is so great that they can unite in the organization of a wholesale society and thus take the next step and cut out the profit of the wholesaler. And when still more societies have grown up and the membership has become sufficiently great, the wholesale society, instead of buying from the importer and manufacturer, imports and manufactures for itself. When this last step has been taken the economic problem is solved; the gamut is run; the revolution is consummated.

Securing commodities at the cost of production is the least of the purposes of the Co-operative Movement. It aims at more important things. It takes advantage of the organization of people who have common needs, and introduces insurance against sickness, death, unemployment, accidents, and old age. It provides pensions for motherhood; makes loans to members; carries families on credit in the event of strikes and lock-outs; provides housing, recreations, club-houses, medical and nursing care, hospitals and sanitariums.

Still a greater benefit than these accrues to the co-operator. It is not alone that the things he needs are made more easily accessible to him; it is not alone that he is freed from the dangers and costs of diseased and adulterated food; it is not alone that he is spared exploitation by all the vicious agencies of profiteering; it is not alone that pensions, insurance, and housing are made possible for him; it is not alone that recreations, art and education are rendered accessible. Co-operation does a greater thing than all these. It develops in the soul of man a new spirit. It makes him a co-operator. It takes hold of the fundamental and primitive instincts—to help one's fellow-man, to be kind, to be generous, to render mutual aid—and encourages him. It teaches people to work together for their mutual benefit, that the concern of one is the concern of all, and that no man can cheat or be cheated without his neighbor also suffering.

All of this is not a theory nor an Utopian dream. It has all come to pass. In England in 1844 twenty-eight poor weavers, with no better destiny than the poorhouse before them, organized the Rochdale Equitable Pioneers Society, with a store with only four commodities, keeping open only in the evening. They had the vision and the philosophy. From that small beginning there has never been a recession. Year after year unflinching success has crowned the movement. Today the co-operative societies in Great Britain embrace one-third of the total population. For forty years the movement has been growing five times faster than the population has increased. During the war the increase has been ten times faster.

Now what do we find? The co-operative societies of Great Britain distribute nearly $1,000,000,000 worth of commodities to their members annually. The "profit," or more properly speaking the savings, to their members amounts to $100,000,000 a year. Of this amount $65,000,000 are returned in cash to the members in the form of "dividends." The British Wholesale Society supplies 12,000 societies. It owns its own steamships. It has thirteen great warehouses. It gave $100,000 toward the construction of the Manchester ship canal along which are its great flour mills. It is the largest purchaser of Canadian wheat. Its eight flour mills are the largest in Great Britain. These mills turn out thirty-five tons of flour every hour for the people who own the mills.

The largest bakery in the world is owned by the co-operators of Glasgow. The British Co-operative Wholesale has sixty-five factories. Their soap works make 500 tons of soap a week. They produce 3,000,000 pairs of boots annually. They conduct three great printing plants. Their creameries and farms produce vast quantities of dairy products, fruit, and vegetables. They have recently purchased 10,000 acres of the best wheat lands in Canada. They own their own coal mines. Their last purchase was the Shil-bottle coal mine, bought only during the present year. They own great tea plantations in Ceylon and vineyards in Spain. In Africa they control vast tracts of land for the production of palm-olives from which oil for their soap factories is procured.

These organizations of consumers—springing from the little society of Rochdale—now bring their own currants from Greece to be made into plum-puddings in their own great factories. The British co-operators now produce almost every commodity: watches, furniture, tinware, machinery, clothing, tobacco, chemicals, leather goods, corsets and brushes. Their total products are five times greater than those of the private manufacturers in the Manufacturers' Association.

They provide concerts, entertainments, acrobats and jugglers. Their welfare-work embraces most every branch of human service. They conduct life-saving stations on the coast and administer large funds for the relief of sufferers from famine and unemployment. Their banking department is next to the Bank of England in importance. One-half of the industrial life and accident insurance done in Great Britain is done by the co-operative society. Their life insurance business is carried on at one twenty-fifth of the cost which the profit-making companies pay.

The British Wholesale Society did a business of $217,000,000 in 1914; in 1917 it will exceed $300,000,000. The Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society is a federation of 264 consumers' societies. In 1916 it did a business of $75,000,000, manufactured $24,000,000 worth of goods, and carried a reserve and insurance fund of nearly $5,000,000. The British Society employs about 200,000 people.

All of this vast business is carried on by people who are producing and distributing for themselves—practically all from the laboring class. As great as the British movement is, the continental movement is still greater. Germany, France and Italy have more societies and more membership than England, Scotland and Ireland. Russia before the war was weak in co-operative societies, but with the growth of the revolutionary movement the societies increased until the Russian movement now has become the greatest in the world. In 1917 there were in Russia 45,000 co-operative societies, with 15,000,000 members. Upon the basis of the head of a household representing five people, this means 75,000,000, which is nearly one-half of the population. The People's Co-operative Bank in Moscow does a business of $1,000,000,000 yearly.

The Co-operative Movement in Belgium is peculiar. The surplus savings are not returnable to the members in the form of cash but are used for social welfare purposes. This money is used for doing for the members of the co-operative societies what the socialized state does for the people in Germany. Old age pension, life insurance, insurance against sickness and unemployment, maternity benefits and medical and nursing care are provided. Those beautiful buildings in Belgium called "the houses of the people" are owned by the co-operative societies. They are community centers, used for meetings, dramatic presentations, schools and recreations. About some of them are parks where fine music is rendered, mothers sew, fathers talk and children play.

This movement of the people in many European countries has been developing so rapidly that it has seemed as though the time were drawing near when the co-operative societies could say that government, as represented in the state, is no longer needed. The time seems approaching when the people in their co-operative societies would do everything for themselves. They would need no state. The only things the state would have that the co-operators would not have are an aristocracy, soldiers and jails.

Co-operation is a great international movement. The International Co-operative Alliance at its last meeting, the year before the war began, had delegates from twenty-four countries. More than twenty countries had wholesale co-operative societies. Fifteen million members were represented. These were the representatives of 75,000,000 consumers. It is now estimated that if the International Alliance holds its next Congress in 1918, the movement will have 40,000,000 members, representing 200,000,000 people. The International Bulletin continues to be published even during the war and monthly contains articles by Englishmen, Germans, Frenchmen, Italians, Austrians and Russians.

During the war the movement, even in the belligerent countries, has made greater progress than ever before. It has not only served the co-operators, but in Europe it has been the greatest of all forces, standing between the people and profit-making business. It has kept down prices, and prevented profiteering, by establishing standards in the costs of production and distribution.

Co-operation is peculiarly practical. It succeeds. When societies begin to produce for themselves, they are not producing for a problematical market; they know definitely what they want. Production is undertaken to supply a known need. There is no over-production nor under-production. No salesmanship, advertising, short-weights, nor adulterated goods play a figure in co-operation.

Wherever co-operation springs up it is attacked by the forces which thrive by robbing the people. Predatory business—big and little—and every agency which is organized to wring profits out of the unorganized consumers are the enemies of co-operation. Every European country has witnessed battles between the co-operators and the trusts; and the co-operators have always won. The great governments of the world have always been more or less antagonistic to co-operation; it has interfered with the privilege of profit-making.

In the United States co-operation is taking root. About 1,000 societies are now in operation. When these societies unite into a confederation the success of the movement in this country will be guaranteed. The more societies there are the greater will be their success. The best results are secured by groups of people who already have some ties to bind them, such as labor organizations, racial affiliations, or society membership. The Finnish people in America are phenomenally successful.

This is the great opportunity for the Negro. The fact that he is the most exploited of all people, that the government discriminates against him, and that he pays more for what he buys than does the white citizen should open his eyes to the possibility of co-operation. He has shown his ability to co-operate as an agricultural producer; he should show it as a consumer.

The Co-operative Movement is bringing the message of hope to the working classes. When one grasps its significance and its possibilities he becomes filled with a holy zeal for its promotion.

HERE are two things which the eyes of man cannot penetrate: one is a Louisiana cane-brake, and the other is the dank bottom-fog which accompanies the precipitation of night in that place.

In the midst of both these Julius Cæsar lay sore, bleeding and wounded. Not the Julius Cæsar of Roman fame, the conqueror of a world, leader of a victorious army, the victim of a traitor's dagger, but Julius Cæsar Kennedy, Julius Cæsar of ante-bellum fame, servant, member of a down-trodden race, but victim of the same weapon as the Julius Cæsar of old. Alone, wounded and bleeding, not in the classic halls of the Senate, but in the midst of a Louisiana cane-brake, surrounded by marsh and bottom-land.

The silence was oppressive. He was too much overcome to do other than scarcely breathe. His pursuers, moved by the dread of giving away their location, dared not whisper. The moon itself was held back by the dense fog which at this time of the year was so cutting that it caused the very hounds themselves, veterans of the man-chase, to cease their erstwhile incessant baying and to give vent to a shivering whine of discomfort.

Julius Cæsar lay sore, wounded and bleeding. Did I say alone? Yes, but I was in error. There were three others with him. Slowly he opened his eyes, beheld them and reached out his hand to them.

The first one grasped the hand firmly and immediately over Cæsar's whole body passed a quiet, sudden feeling of relief. All traces of the recent fatigue passed; his eyes brightened; his breathing came less and less in jerks; pain fled. He moved not, but he was at rest. This visitor was Numbness, sent by a pitying Creator in answer to a heart-meant prayer.

The other visitor came forward and grasped his hand. Gleams of a past youth returned to Cæsar's eyes. Smiles flitted across his face. Now a tear; now a frown. Caesar lay firmly clasped by her whom mankind calls Memory.

* * * * *

Two boys sat together in the corner of the great plantation kitchen. Two boys thought. One bore the brightness of the mid-day sun; the other betrayed the touch of the dusky twilight eve. In the minds of each was a vision of a newly-mounded grave containing the last earthly remains of a little black woman. In the heart of each was the feeling of a loss sustained. One thought of the bed-time stories, the knick-knacks, the plaintive plantation melodies, the cooling hand on the fevered brow, the thousand pleasures emanating only from a mammy. In the heart of the other was engraven the picture of a mother, the sacrifices made, the food confiscated, the cast-away clothing made wearable, the love borne,—the mother. Two boys wept, and in the throes of a mutual sorrow two boys embraced, each inwardly swearing eternal friendship and loyalty.

* * * * *

Two men were together. Two old men were together. In the countenance of each was not only age, but evidences of a new sorrow.

"Caesar," said one, "of all men alive, you best know my condition. You have long known it and only loyalty has prevented you from leaving as the others have done. Now that same loyalty must force me to make you go. The low tariff on sugar has completely ruined me. My plantation, our old home, has long been gone. Of what little was left me, life in this city with its clubs and other social obligations, I have little left. The same day that witnessed the departure of my money viewed the departure of friends, all but you. But even you must go now. I am going back to the country. I have enough to live on until the end, which I feel will not be long. Joe, your son, has wanted you to live with him. Go to him. No, not a word. Good bye."

* * * * *

Two men addressed different audiences. In the heart of one audience was the feeling of unrequited labor, the feeling of unequal chance, the feeling of disfranchisement, the feeling of being legally unprotected, the feeling even of fear of owning decent homes, lest they be burned. On the faces of the other audience was expressed fear lest a too long down-trodden people should arise to avenge the untimely deaths of thousands of their innocent men and women, fear lest their best but under-paid field-hands should leave their crops wasting in the fields, fear lest they themselves, inherently gentlemen, should be forced to the painful necessity of being reduced to the plane of field-laborers.

"Brethren," spoke the darker man, "from the great city of New Orleans I have heard the tramp of your exodus. I have listened to it and I have been struck with fear and anxiety for you. From the distance I heard grave rumors of German intrigue. I am glad to know that you are leaving, not on account of German influence, but on account of your own honest but distorted convictions.

"Thousands of you are leaving for the great cities of the North, where you can find peace, freedom to work, opportunity to live, become educated, and enjoy the full rights of citizenship.

"Think you that these conditions will last? Be not led on by your fanciful imaginations. Thousands of you will die of cold and exposure. More of you will surely perish of starvation. The others who survive will live only to see themselves again replaced by the influx of foreigners who are sure to come immediately after the end of the European struggle.

"This is your home. This is my home. This is the home of your and my fathers. This climate is peculiarly suited to you. True, you may not be treated exactly as you wish to be, but that, too, must come before the end of time. The white folks of the South know you and those of the North do not. They——"

"They do not lynch us and they do pay us," interrupted a listener, and pandemonium greeted the interruption.

The other addressed another audience: "Fellow citizens, all of my life has been spent for you and with you. All this land was once my own. I have lived to see it lost to me and owned by a people once the slaves of my father and your father. These people, once so gentle and mild, I have seen grow up and now they are becoming overbearing and haughty. More than that, they are becoming lawless and vicious. They regard themselves as our equals and are demanding equal rights. They are sulking and nursing what they are pleased to call a grudge against us. Have we not done for them all that we could have done? True, we have punished a few of them in order to teach the others a lesson, but that had to be.

"The enemy of the whole world is rising against us and is working hourly against us through this people. These people may rise up and strike at any moment. Our homes, our lives, the lives of our children, and, above all, the lives and safety of our womanhood is imperiled. Shall we stand idly by and see them outraged?"

"To-night, even at this moment, they are having a meeting which may break up in a revolution against us, who have been their best friends. A man who has just returned from the meeting tells me that the one whom the Germans have selected as a leader to stir them up is old Uncle Julius Cæsar. I can hardly believe it. Yet it must be so. In his veins is the same blood that courses through mine, but it is poisoned by other blood that is prone to ungratefulness and lawlessness.

I reared him. I gave him his education and am thus in a great measure responsible for his conduct. He must be made an object lesson. It breaks my heart to be the leader, but I feel it my duty, and I will lead any of you who will undertake to administer this object lesson."

* * * * *

Julius Cæsar lay sore, wounded and bleeding. In the East the feast attendant upon the birth of a new day was beginning. The dense fog was lifting. The baying of the hounds came at shorter intervals. The crackling of twigs betrayed the searching party. Memory loosed her grasp upon the fugitive's hand. The eyes of the old servant became as of glass; the blood ceased coursing through his body; his limbs stiffened and became rigid; the heart-beats slackened, quivered, stopped. Cæsar grasped an icy hand. The last visitor was Death.

IN THE CANTONMENTS

a paved highway, make the approach easier than to any other camp. A year ago there were numerous truck farms where now are hundreds of buildings and a population of forty thousand men, of whom some six thousand are colored.

A TRIP to Camp Meade will not soon be forgotten. Not that Camp Meade differs so much from thirteen other National Army Cantonments and the fifteen National Guard Mobilization Training Camps, but because it furnishes a glimpse of the life of all of those.

Camp Meade is twenty-five miles from Washington, D. C., and a little less from Baltimore, Md., lying directly between these cities. Two railways, an electric road and

In reaching the colored section of the camp you pass through a portion of the white sections. Men are drilling, digging trenches, riding, driving, moving here and there,—always moving. The blast of a speeding motorcycle warns you to clear the road, the rapid foot-falls of an orderly's horse remind you that a messenger is passing with despatches. Passing from the white section into the colored quarters you see the same action, the same riding, motor-ing, sentinels, the same type of barracks, uniform in design, without paint and porches, built for a purpose. The soil at Camp Meade is very sandy and if the weather has been dry you find yourself struggling through stretches of sand and dust. These colored men have all been drafted, brought here without any choice of their own. Do they consider themselves prisoners, driven slaves to die, it may be, in a strange land under all forms of savage butchery and horror? Do they feel that they are being forced to fight for white peoples who have sought all forms of means by law and custom to degrade them? Let us look for the answers.

When you inquire the way to Colonel Jackson's 368th Regiment of Infantry the black soldier looks you squarely in the eye, gives the direction in a few explicit words, probably accompanies you a short distance, so as to point to some landmark, and passes on. In the maze of buildings you will question a number of times before you reach headquarters. It is always the same courteous answer, the same evidence of discipline. Captain Louis Mellinger is the affable colored adjutant and intelligence officer. Surrounding him are a number of lieutenants, orderlies. Yes, your son will be found in barracks B-28, fourth street down, two blocks to the right. The sergeant in charge, officer of the day, will help you to find him. While you look for your son there are many mothers looking likewise for sons, many fathers, daughters, brothers, sweet-hearts on the same mission. All are carrying baskets of good things to eat, woolen socks, something from home. The procession moves here and there, for it is Saturday afternoon, visitors' day, when the boys do not have regular tasks to perform.

The camp is five miles wide and fifteen miles long. The colored section is probably a half mile wide and a mile long. Besides sleeping quarters, there are the mess-hall for each regiment, the laundry and lavatory, the hospital, the officers' quarters, the exchange, the corral. There are playgrounds between buildings and squads of football contestants, baseball players and others at sport. One soldier had an opossum he had captured. Visitors and soldiers are grouped everywhere. Entering the mess-hall at meal time you see hundreds of sturdy men eating with evident appetites a meal that appears well-cooked and wholesome. Each soldier's kit is an aluminum outfit, plate with a handle, knife and fork and cup. These he takes to the kitchen shelf and is served; thence he goes to the table and after eating proceeds to the tub of hot water where he washes his vessels and returns with them to his quarters. His sleeping-room is a long hall, without privacy, the single cots being arranged in long rows like the public ward of a hospital. Over each cot is a shelf where a few books, the mess-kit, some home pictures, etc., are kept. Men are not noisy here nor elsewhere, the conversation being more or less serious, but even when frivolous the gaiety is subdued.

But all these buildings and grounds would be spiritless were it not for the Y. M. C. A. buildings and their secretaries. How the army has ever existed without them seems a mystery. Here the men come to write letters, to read papers and magazines, to hear lectures, to see moving-pictures, to hear concerts, to see boxing-matches.

"I am sorry I did not get here earlier," said an erect corporal. "The life is pretty tough, but I like it. I stand in line for early promotion and I am studying for it. You would be surprised," he said, "how these men who have come here are trying to learn. Many of them could not read or write. They are fast learning both."

Colored men at Camp Meade, six thousand of them, are proving what has been proven many times over, that the Negro has a wonderful gift of adapting himself to whatever condition confronts him. Few of them would have volunteered for so serious a job, none are fretting that they are forced into it. Most of them appreciate the mission of beating the Germans, all are doing with cheerfulness the daily tasks that are given them in preparation for the slaughter. Gathered from all walks of life, of various grades of society, they are as congenial as if they were university students. From six o'clock reveille to ten o'clock taps, whether the duties of the day call for long hikes, for digging trenches, for scrubbing floors, for long hours of sentinel duty, there are no men of America performing their tasks of preparation more manly and cheerfully than these black sons and citizens of a Nation that cannot blot out the color line of outrage or opportunity on its own soil.

Men of the Month

A WELFARE WORKER.

THE late Mrs. Anna V. Andrews, who died at her home in Sumter, S. C., on September 19, 1917, was reared and educated in Washington, and returned to her birthplace, Sumter, where she was married to Mr. W. T. Andrews, a prominent lawyer, and now Editor of The Daily Herald of Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Andrews was an active social worker. In 1912, she organized the "One More Effort Club," which has done much toward the relief of the distressed and unfortunate ones. Her work extended into the larger sphere of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, of which she was First Vice-President.

She was a fine character, and lived a life devoted to her fellowmen.

A YOUNG DENTIST.

DR. THEODORE R. MOZEE, a successful young dentist, died at his home in Chicago, Ill., November 17, 1917.

Dr. Mozee was born in St. Louis, Mo., January 19, 1882, of Louise and Louis Mozee. The first twenty-two years of his life were spent in that city. His preparatory schooling stopped at the sixth grade, when he was compelled to help support the family.

He began his professional training in dentistry at Meharry Medical School, Nashville, Tenn. Later, he entered the Dental School of the University of Illinois, from which he was graduated in June, 1909. He was intensely loyal to his race and believed that the development of co-operative business enterprises was one of its most urgent needs. His efforts along this line took the shape of the Kashmir Chemical Company, which he founded and organized. He was a member of the Beta Chapter of Sigma Pi Phi, and of the local society of colored dentists.

A widow survives him, nee Miss Cecelia Johnson, a graduate of the University of Chicago.

PAUL LE ROY ROBESON.

THIS athlete is only nineteen years old, but he is six feet, two inches high, and weighs 210 pounds.

He is the son of the Rev. W. D. Robeson, a Methodist clergyman in Somerville, N. J. He was graduated from the Somerville, N. J., High School in 1915, at the head of his class. In high school he was full-back on the football team. He entered Rutgers College on a four years' scholarship, won in competitive examination, in which he made the highest average in the state. He became a member of the varsity football team in his first year at Rutgers. He came into prominence, however, only recently, when he played with his colleagues and gained the victory over the Newport Naval Reserves, a team composed of former All-American players and led by Cupid Black, captain of Yale's team last year.

Mr. Robeson has since been placed on the All-American and All-Eastern teams of practically every critic. His coach, Mr. George Foster Sanford, says: "Robeson is the best football player in the country today."

Mr. Robeson, also, has maintained a high scholastic record. He has won the class oratorical prize for two years, a feat never before accomplished in the school. He is varsity debater, plays guard in basketball, throws weights in track, catches in baseball, and is a baritone soloist.

he was general secretary in Atlanta, Ga., for the colored work of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church. At the present time he is corresponding secretary in FOUR GENERATIONS OF THE FAMILY OF DR. I. G. PENN.

A METHODIST.

DR. I. GARLAND PENN was born near Lynchburg, Va., October 7, 1867, the oldest of five children. His parents are still living. He was educated in the public and high schools of Lynchburg. He was supervising principal in the public school system of Lynchburg from 1887 to 1895; from 1895-96 he was national commissioner of Negro exhibits at the Cotton States and International Convention, for which he received a gold medal for the excellence of the exhibit; from 1897-1912

Cincinnati, Ohio, for the Freedmen's Aid Society of this church. He has been a member of the General Conference of the M. E. Church for twenty-eight years, and is one of two colored commissioners on the Joint High Commission of the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church South.

Dr. Penn is the author of "The Afro-American Press," a history of Negro journalism; he edited "The United Negro," and was co-author of "Seven Graded Sunday Schools." He is father of seven children.

THE NEW PHILANTHROPY

THE usual assumption is that Negroes are inadequate and inefficient and need "help." Thus, philanthropy in the Negro Players, in New York City, because they were real players with a new and beautiful message. Mr. Coady exhibited the delightfully naive and promising work of past has usually taken the form of alms giving, so far as Negroes are concerned. There is arising, however, a new and encouraging form of philanthropy toward colored folk.

The new philanthropists like Emilie Bigelow Hapgood, Richard J. Coady, John C. Freund and Robert Edmund Jones are interested in Negroes not because of their race but because they have been especially stirred by the artistic possibilities of the Negro race. Mrs. Hapgood staged the Negro children not because they were black but because they had talent. Mr. Freund as editor of Musical America has always given prompt and generous recognition to Negro music. Mr. Jones has the seeing eye which recognizes the value and beauty of color in human skins, and his staging and draping of the Negro Players was singularly happy and promising.

We are glad to have our readers know the faces of these four philanthropists of the new order.

The Looking Glass

The New York Evening Post mentions a volume on "The Black Man's Part in the War," which has not yet reached us. The author, Sir Harry Johnston, speaks of the more than fifty million Negro peoples under the British flag:

Some remarkable instances of loyalty to the British flag among these peoples at the beginning of the war are related by the author. Almost every tribe, for example, in the South Pacific has sent free-will offerings to the British Government. One island in the New Hebrides, which was till lately remarkable for cannibalism, sent $350 to the fund in aid of British widows and orphans. Two tribes of British West Africa hastily composed their quarrels lest they embarrass the British at this critical time, and their division sent in $8,000 to assist in the war of their kindly rulers. The Negroes of the West Indies are estimated to have contributed $10,000,000 to the various war funds, besides sending some hard fighting battalions for African service. In South Africa 40,000 Negroes served as a labor corps in Botha's command, while in the winter of 1916-17 there were between 6,000 and 7,000 Kafir-Zulus and Basutos laboring in France.

"Latest Light on Abraham Lincoln," by Ervin Chapman (2 vol., Revell) devotes nearly one hundred pages to Lincoln and Slavery. It does not, however, seem to shed any new light on the subject.

THE LIBERAL SOUTH.

THE addresses and discussions of the Law and Order Conference, held at Blue Ridge, N. C., last summer by liberal white Southerners, have been issued in a pamphlet of 125 pages. Some of the statements are astonishingly liberal. The summary address delivered by W. D. Weatherford at the closing session, says: "We have very reluctantly preached a gospel of liberty, advancement, self-respect to these [colored] people. We have even hoped they would not make progress. We have scarcely dared to think of sharing with them the privileges of real manhood. But we are come to the parting of ways."

Kate Herndon Trawick was especially fine. She showed that commitments for rape were much more common among the foreign-born than among Negroes; that rape was only a minor cause of lynching; that fifty-one women had been lynched in twenty-five years; that the testimony of attacked women under certain circumstances was utterly untrustworthy, and that:

The women of both races have much to forgive the Southern white man. Insult has been added to injury for generations, and I can see no remedy for the situation until the white women refuse to submit longer to the humiliation of body, mind, and soul they have been forced to endure under the double standard of our present social organization. They must demand that further degradation of white and Negro races be stopped, that lynchings be abolished, and that the personality of white and colored women be respected. The white and the colored women can never come to a place of mutual respect, understanding, and sympathy until the white man ceases to build higher the barrier now standing between them. Hate begets hate—prejudice breeds prejudice. Women (white and Negro) is the main factor in the problem of racial hostility.

Arthur Spear, of Birmingham, Ala., said:

I asked a furniture dealer who sold large quantities of furniture to Negroes, what percent of his sales he failed to collect. He replied that they did not lose any, as they kept five men out all of the time collecting weekly payments. In addition to collecting, each man's task was to sell one thousand dollars' worth of furniture per month and keep up with the movement of the people to see that none was lost. I asked one agent what was the difference in his cash price and his time price. He said a suite of furniture that he sold for forty dollars cash he got eighty dollars and over on time with small weekly payments. As one Negro expressed it: "Boss, you can get all the furniture you want if you pay a dollar down and a dollar a week the balance of your life." From a system of this kind it will be hard to develop leaders and build character even in the white man, to say the least of what it will do for the blacks.

Dr. W. F. Tillett, of Nashville, asked:

Who is at the bottom of the mob business? I give it as my judgment that of the ringleaders that go in to revenge the rape of women, fifty percent of the mob and the ringleaders are men that would be, and many are, guilty of the same crime themselves. They are not only men who would rape colored women, but men who would violate the law with regard to their own white women.

There were, of course, some reactionary and apologetic statements, as, for instance, when the gentleman from South Carolina explained that Anthony Crawford was not simply insolent once, but was generally "bumptious!" Wherefore he was lynched!

We also note with some amusement that while one lonesome colored man was present and read a paper, he was evidently hiding in the underbrush when the photograph of the delegates was taken.

TRADES UNIONS.

THE attitude of trades unions toward Negroes is well known to the initiated, but seldom have illustrative facts been more clearly stated than in Epstein's excellent "Negro Migrant in Pittsburgh," which we have already mentioned and which we especially commend to readers (Crisis Office, 74 pp., fifty cents). The author says in answer to a widespread charge:

I: only one instance in our survey of the Pittsburgh Trade Unions was a complaint lodged against colored people taking the places of striking white workers. This was in a waiters' strike and was won just the same, because the patrons of the restaurants protested against the substitution of Negro waiters. In all the others there were no such occurrences. Indeed, the number of Negroes taking the places of striking whites and of skilled white workers is so small that it is hardly appreciable.

They are, as we have seen, largely taking the places which were left vacant by the unskilled foreign laborers since the beginning of the war, and the new places created by the present industrial boom. No effective effort has been made to organize these unskilled laborers by the recognized American labor movement. These people, therefore, whose places are now being taken by the Negroes, worked under no American standard of labor, and the fear of these unskilled laborers breaking down labor standards which have never existed is obviously unfounded.

In only two Pittsburgh Unions are Negroes freely admitted: the Hod-Carriers' and the Hoisting Engineers'. In both these cases "the colored man has proved to be as good a unionist as his white fellows."

As to other unions the author gives several illustrative instances:

An official of a very powerful Union which has a membership of nearly five thousand said that it had about five colored members. He admitted that there are several hundred Negroes working in the same trade in this city, but his organization does not encourage them to organize and will admit one of them only when he can prove his ability in his work—a technical excuse for exclusion. This official was a man who was born in the South; he believed in the inferiority of the Negro, deplored the absence of a Jim-Crow system, and was greatly prejudiced.

Another official of an even more powerful trade union was greatly astonished when he learned that there are white people who take an interest in the Negro question. He absolutely refused to give any information and did not think it was worth-while to answer such questions, although he admitted that his Union had no colored people and would never accept them. There are, however, several hundred Negroes working at this trade in the city. White members related numerous incidents of white unionists leaving a job when a colored man appeared. Several other unions visited had no Negroes in the Union, although there were some local colored people in their respective trades.

On January 1, 1917, a group of about thirty unorganized Negro plasterers sent the following letter to the Operative Plasterers' and Cement Finishers' International Association of the United States with offices at Middletown, Ohio:

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 1, 1917.

"We, the undersigned Colored Plasterers of the City of Pittsburgh, met in a session on the above-named date, and after forming an Organization for our mutual benefit voted to petition to you our grievances on the grounds of being discriminated against because of our color. We, therefore, would like to have a Local Body of our own for our people. We also voted to ask you for the advice and consideration of such a movement, and hereby petition you that you grant us a license for a local of our own, to be operated under your jurisdiction, praying this will meet with your approval, and hoping to get an early reply. . . ."

The International then sent the following reply:

"Replying to your letter, we are writing our Pittsburgh Local today in reference to your application for charter. According to the rules and regulations of our organization, no organization can be chartered in any city where we have a Local without consulting the older Organization."

This was signed by the Secretary of the International Association.

The Pittsburgh Local then invited the Secretary of the colored organization to appear at their regular meeting. When the Secretary came, they told him he could have five minutes time in which to present his claims. Nothing resulted from this meeting and no written statement whatsoever was made by the Pittsburgh Local in spite of attempts to secure such. . . .

Another illustration of the difficulty confronting the colored person when he desires to join a Union, is the following: Two colored migrants, J. D. and C. S., painters from Georgia, had applied to the Union for membership in November and December, 1916, respectively. Both of these persons have their families here, and claim fourteen and sixteen years' experience in the trade, stating also that they can do as good a job as any other union man. Each one of these claims to have made from $25 to $30 a week in the South by contracting. The official in the office of the Union whom they approached to ask for membership unceremoniously told them that it would take no colored men into membership. The result was that one of these men was fortunate enough to find work in his own line in a non-union shop, receiving twenty dollars per week for eight and one-half hours, as compared with $5.50 for an eight hour day, the union scale. The second man, however, was not so fortunate, and unable to find work in his own line, he is now working as a common laborer in a steel plant making $2.70 for ten hours per day. . . .

The following case which throws light on the general situation, and illustrates the resultant effects of this injustice was related by the head clerk of the State Employment Bureau of this city:

"In the month of June, 1917, a man giving the name of P. Bobonis, a Porto Rican, came to our office and asked for work as a carpenter. Mr. Bobonis was a union carpenter, a member of the Colorado State Union. The first place he was sent they told him they were filled up, and when a call was made to determine if the company had sufficient carpenters, the foreman said that it was impossible for them to employ a colored carpenter as all of the white men would walk out, but that they were still badly in need of carpenters. It was then decided to call upon the different companies recognizing the union, to see if they all felt the same way. Much to our amazement we found it to be the general rule—the colored man could pay his initiation fee and dues in the Union, but after that was done he was left little hopes for employment. Four large companies were called for this man and he could not be placed. As a last attempt, a call on the Dravo Contracting Company was made and as they have some union and others non-union men, they employed the man.

"Mr. Bobonis was not a floater, but a good man. He is a graduate of Oberlin College and is now working to raise enough money to enable him to study medicine."

PALMARES.

THE first number of Volume Three of the Journal of Negro History has articles on "Josiah Henson," "Elizabeth Barrett Browning and the Negro," and "Slavery in California." The most interesting bit is an historic incident related by Charles E. Chapman of a revolt of slaves in Brazil.

In 1650, forty determined Negroes of the Province of Pernambuco, all of them natives of Guinea, rose against their masters, taking as much as they could in the way of arms and provisions, and fled to the neighboring forest. There they founded a quilombo on the site of a well-known Negro village of earlier days, which the Dutch had destroyed. The tale of their escape was told throughout the province, with the result that it was not long before the population of the new quilombo was greatly increased. Slaves and freemen were eager to join their brethren in the forest. It seemed prudent, however, to go farther away from the white settlements, lest the very strength of the Negro town should invite annihilation or re-enslavement by the planters. Thus it was that the inland site of Palmares, not far from the present-day Anadia, was chosen. A town was founded, and all seemed well except for one thing—an essential to permanence was lacking, for there were no women. A detachment of Negroes was sent on the romantic mission of procuring wives for the colony. This party marched to the nearest plantations, and, without stopping to discriminate, took all the women it could find, black, mulatto, and white. Palmares was now on a secure footing indeed.

Gradually the town gained a population of twenty thousand with several surrounding towns. The Republic lasted nearly fifty years, but was finally overthrown by the Portuguese in a regular siege with cannon. The leaders committed suicide and the prisoners were all put to death.

THE "JIM-CROW" CAR.

THE New York Evening Post began the discussion:

Mr. McAdoo may be relied upon to fight any effort to do away with the Jim-Crow car. It was he who started the discriminations in the departments at Washington, and he is proud of it. It will not affect him that on these trains the United States will be discriminating between its colored and white soldiers, and that some of its eight hundred colored officers may publicly be Jim-Crowed, as if they did not wear an officers' uniform. It is, therefore, not likely that any change will take place if the Government control of the lines is limited to the period of the war. Should, however, Government ownership become permanent, the colored people may be relied upon, after peace is declared, to keep the country in a turmoil on this question until it is settled aright. They are the more keen for the struggle, and for Government ownership, because the Railway Unions discriminate against them, whereas, if the railroads are Federalized and all employees placed under the Civil Service laws, colored men will be able to become conductors and engineers and aspire to even higher places now denied them.

The Richmond Times-Despatch is real pessimistic:

These cars are operated under the application of the doctrine of the reserved rights of the States, not all of which included rights have as yet been voluntarily surrendered to the Federal Government. However, under the yielding tendency of the times, the South may come around to the point where it concedes that national authority can regulate the question of "Jim-Crow" cars with more wisdom than the States have shown.

The Shreveport, La., Journal also declares at considerable length that:

Any serious attempt to wipe out the separate car laws will inevitably cause trouble. Industrious and well meaning southern Negroes, living in perfect peace and amity with the whites, would, undoubtedly, oppose any changes in social laws that affect that relationship.

As Shreveport has had more lynchings than any other single town in the South, it may be surmised that the number of Negroes there, "living in perfect peace and amity with the whites" is not large.

The New Orleans States complains that:

It is perhaps not improper to say that the railroads themselves have been much to blame for some of the resentment among southern colored people against the so-called Jim-Crow car laws. The States provided for separate accommodations for the two races and the higher court upheld the laws based on equality of accommodations. But the railroads have not observed the letter and spirit of the laws. They have provided inferior, in some cases inexcusably objectionable accommodations, and the colored race has had a justifiable ground of protest.

Under Government control this, of course, can be corrected. Segregation is for the welfare of the two races in the South. But it ought not to mean that the colored traveler should be relegated to what in many cases is little better than a cattle car.

But the New York World is implacable:

The Democracy of the South is largely a Jim-Crow Democracy. Nothing else matters much. To keep the Negro from voting, the Fifteenth Amendment has been nullified. To keep the Negro sober in order that he will work more steadily, the South purposes to fasten Prohibition upon the rest of the country. To keep the Negro out of the white man's railroad cars is a subject that would naturally appeal to the average Southern Democrat. It represents the one political principle to which he consistently adheres. If Jim-Crowism is menaced in any way by the Administration's Railroad Bill, Southern Democracy in Congress can be counted on to join hands with Old Guard Republicanism in the North to hold up the measure, whatever effect delay may have on the winning of the war.

Making the world safe for democracy is not half so important as keeping the South safe for Jim-Crowism.

THE ANTHONY AMENDMENT.

THE Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal is much depressed:

The Southern opponents of the resolution in the House recently knew that the adoption of the amendment will so increase the suffrage of the nation as greatly to minimize the relative sectional power of the South; that the suffrage which it will increase in the South is the black suffrage, for whose suppression the South has stood solid since the days of Reconstruction; that even if in the future, as in the past, the South may be able to suppress the black vote it must face the inevitable penalty of radical reduction of representation, for the very women who are behind this movement for the ballot have repeatedly and formally announced that one of the objects for which they intend to use the ballot is to see to it that representation shall be based on the number of actual voters, not as now on population. Moreover, since these Southern Congressmen committed the stupendous blunder of voting for the resolution submitting a constitutional amendment for national prohibition they have begun to see new Force Bills meant to vitalize the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution, against which resistance by the South, no longer aided by the Northern Democrats, will be futile.

The two Misses Gordon, who have been much petted by northern suffragists, are furious at the prospect of a Federal Amendment. The New Orleans Times-Picayune says:

Miss Gordon explained that by a Federal amendment Negro women would be placed on the same par with white women, and that while white men would be willing to club Negro men away from the polls they would not use the club upon black women. "If the white men of the South are not willing to raise their women above the Negro men, then the Federal ballot will not do it," Miss Gordon said impressively. "If the Federal amendment should be ratified I shall have to revise my statement about the polls being proper places for white women, for they will certainly not be, and if the Democrats do force a Federal amendment upon us, they will be no better than Republicans.

"Should a Federal amendment be ratified dealing with the suffrage," said Miss Jean Gordon, "then the National Government will supervise our elections, and we shall have the Reconstruction period over again."

The Philadelphia Evening Telegraph supports Miss Gordon's contentions:

Moreover, it will be conducive to the integrity of elections when national authority is exercised under the powers which this amendment will grant. The pretexts which have disfranchised so much of the Negro vote in the South will not be permitted to go unnoticed in the case of the Negro woman vote. There has long been needed a Federal supervision in the case of certain elections, and the proposed amendment will bring it.

"THE OFFICE BOY."

WHILE the editor of the New York Times was out the other afternoon, the office boy wrote the usual editorial about the South. He naturally slipped into some contradictions, being inexperienced, but he did about as well as the Times usually does on the subject. First, of course, he dickered on the "warm, long-standing affection existing between the white man and the colored." Then, after a short nap, he notes that the South has passed laws: "galling and humiliating to the entire colored population. . . . The result has, naturally, been not improved conditions, but bad blood on both sides, relations more strained than before. Neither side was happy."

Bracing up, the young gentleman then describes the South as the place where the Negro is blest; for it is there: "by nature and endowment he is most at home, where he is best understood, and in reality best liked, and where his best service and highest happiness lie."

After this he describes the North, as the place where the Negro "would not, as in his Southern home, be reminded of his black skin every time he met a policeman, entered a street car, railway station or train, and in a hundred other less conspicuous ways in the course of a day."

Next he proceeds further to impress us with the "kindly" and "friendly" collective "attitude of the white people," and tops off the whole thing thus grandly:

At the same time, the relations between white employer and colored worker, in a broad, impersonal way, have not been happy.

Don't you like that "broad, impersonal" gesture? He probably refers to the twenty-five hundred or more Negroes whom the South has lynched in the last quarter-century in a "broad, impersonal way."

TRUCKLERS AND TRAITORS.

WE have our inner problems as well as outer; one of them is Silas Xavier Floyd, the colored principal of a public school in Augusta, Ga. The Augusta Chronicle thus reports a recent speech of his:

Every now and then, you will hear Negroes saying that they have no chance, they have no rights—everything is against them. When colored people talk this way, they mean, as a general thing, that they can't vote, that they can't ride in the same cars with white people on railroad trains, that they must sit behind on the trolley cars, that they must go to the galleries in churches and theatres, etc. Every time I hear a colored man say a thing like that I ask myself this question: "What would he do with the chance if he had it?" A great many rights and privileges are not denied the colored man of the South, and what use is he making of his chances? More things are granted Negroes in the South than are denied them. The right to an education is open to us; we also have the chance to work and the chance to save; nobody hinders us from going into business; nobody objects to our having clean homes to live in; and there is no law against our becoming decent, honorable, reliable and trustworthy citizens.

When you think of the small—relatively small—progress the Negro has made in education and in the accumulation of money and property and in the attaining of upright, honorable citizenship, you may well ask: What would the Negro do with other rights and privileges, if he had them?

There isn't any law against colored people becoming Christians and joining the church and living Christian lives. And yet how many of them go to church? How many of them are serving, really serving, the Lord?

In Georgia, especially in Georgia, there is no reason why the colored man should whine and cry and mourn and lament. I know that our State carries the belt in the record of lynchings, and I know that in some parts of Georgia the Negro is being driven out; but, in spite of all the darkness, there are many signs of light and hope and encouragement for the Negro in our Georgia sky.

Mr. Floyd will, doubtless, hold his job, if the white school officials have their way. Also, here's another colored gentleman, according to the Saturday News, a Hopkinsville, Ky., colored paper:

Wakefield, principal of the Madisonville colored schools, was haled before the United States Circuit Court at Owensboro recently, where he pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with using the mails for immoral purposes. The offence to the people was specifically in writing a letter to a colored hotel keeper in Hopkinsville asking him to make arrangements for a county superintendent in a certain county to meet a colored girl. . . .

Wakefield is guilty; he says so himself, yet we are informed that he opened his school in Madisonville recently with sang froid, as consummate as if he had been away to preach a funeral of a friend. . . .

The question that arises should not arise in a civilized community—the question as to why Wakefield should be permitted even to enter a school room again in face of his damnable confession.

MISCEGENATION

ONCE in a while, like a sun spot, we get glimpses of the flaming hell in the far South, particularly in that part which is so wild against all legitimate intermingling of races. The colored editor of the Austin, Tex., Herald writes in a leader:

Recently the editor made a trip in the Brazos bottom, where he spoke in the interest of prohibition. . . .

In many places white men are living openly and outright with Negro women. A Negro can hardly rear a respectable girl, especially if she lay any claim to beauty. We have been reliably informed by some of the best men in all Texas, white and colored, that a young Negro man has recently been made to leave his home. His wife, we have also been informed, is now living in the house with the white man who is responsible for her husband having to leave his home.

Another case was brought to our attention: it is alleged that a white man rode boldly up to the home of a Negro and offered two hundred dollars to the father of a pretty fourteen-year-old girl for the virtue of his daughter. When the father protested, the scoundrel had the audacity and the unmitigated gall to tell him that he might as well accept the money, for he, the white-faced brute, was going to have the girl or go to h—-. He certainly belongs there, and the father should have put him on the first train out, if he himself had to follow on the next train.

Many of this class of white men are trustees over Negro schools in many sections, and they seek to employ that class of Negro women teachers who will bow their knees to Baal. The best class of Negroes are powerless to remedy these evils. If they raise their voices against this hellish propaganda, they are called meddlesome and forced to take up their beds and walk. Talk about peonage! There cannot exist a worse condition than herein described.

John Ruskin writes in "Modern Painters":
"I think the noblest sea that Turner has ever painted, and, if so, the noblest certainly ever painted by man, is that of 'The Slave Ship.' . . . Purple and blue, the lurid

the lightning of the sea, its thin masts written upon the sky in lines of blood, girded with condemnation in that fearful hue which signs the sky with horror, and mixes its flaming flood with the sunlight, and,

"THE SLAVE SHIP"

shadows of the hollow breakers are cast upon the mist of night, which gathers cold and low, advancing like the shadow of death upon the guilty ship as it labors amidst cast far along the desolate heave of the sepulchral waves, incarnadines the multitudinous sea."

The Outer Pocket

I AM a man seventy-six years old, son of a man who was one of the associates of William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Clarence Lenox Remond, George Thompson of England, Parker Pillsbury, A. T. Foss, Frederick A. Douglass, Sojourner Truth, and the other great anti-slavery leaders, with all of whom I was intimately acquainted when a youth and young man.

I was brought up, consequently, free from any prejudices or other feeling towards the colored people, except sympathy and fraternal feelings. When at school I had as seat-mate in the district school, at my request, James Empral, the grandson of Sojourner Truth.

I copied the notes and prepared them for the printer, a kindly lady had written them out from time to time from Sojourner's dictation, for the little pamphlet of her life. My father, Samuel L. Hill, kept a station of the "underground railroad," and many of the refugees from slavery were harbored at his house during my youth and forwarded by him and by his hired man and myself on their way to Canada and freedom.

When with Mr. Sumner Osgood of West Roxbury recently he loaned me several copies of THE CRISIS, the first I had ever seen or ever heard of, wonderful to relate, and I would like to continue reading the periodical.

Florence, Mass. ARTHUR G. HILL.
Oakland, California.

I wish that I could be with the conference and tell them of the good conduct of the Twenty-fourth Infantry while they were in San Francisco. This entire Infantry was stationed at the Presideo of San Francisco during the entire summer and fall of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition which was held during 1915.

The conduct of the Infantry was so very good that the Exposition officials decided to honor the Negro soldiers with a special day, which they called the "Lincoln Day." The exercises were opened by a Military Parade which was led by the entire Twenty-fourth Infantry of Negro soldiers; they were headed by a Negro band and bandmaster, and following these troops were the U. S. Marines, Sailors, Hospital Corps and Cavalry, all white. The Negroes lead the day. I was at the time acting as special feature writer for the Oakland Daily Tribune.

I not only reported the affair in the daily paper but for four race papers. Three days previous to the Lincoln Day parade the Twenty-fourth Infantry acted as Special Escort to the "Liberty Bell," which was leaving for its return trip to Philadelphia.

The San Francisco Daily Chronicle had a picture of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, and spoke kindly of them.

It was also very kind in its remarks when they left San Francisco, saying among other things, that they had all behaved like gentlemen during the many months at the Presideo of San Francisco. You remember that afterward when the Liberty Bell reached Fort Worth, Texas, and a colored child attempted to kiss it, it almost caused a riot. I fear that I shall have to pray all the rest of my days that God will help me forgive the execution of these Negro soldiers, not that I wish to condone for anything they might have done, but because try as I will I cannot but feel that the honor shown them at the P. P. I. E. was too much for the memory of the people of Texas, and thus for escorting the Liberty Bell they paid the price in after years with their lives. I firmly believe that whatever they did in Houston, they were aggravated to do. While San Francisco, with all its mixed population, was a good test of the manhood and honor of these Negro boys, they stood the test and left a clean record behind them.

DELILAH L. BEASLEY.

Auburn, New York.

I am sending four dollars by mail. One is for renewal of my subscription to the CRISIS, the other three as the best expression I can give, under the circumstances, of my faith in your efforts toward the advancement of the welfare of our people.

I am a life-termer in Auburn Prison. A year's earning is but four dollars and fifty cents, so you must accept this little mite rather for the spirit that goes with it than for the sum itself.

Wishing you all the strength and courage of heart and mind, which you must need for your great task of securing a people's rights, I am, as ever,

JOHN THOMAS.

The Horizon

THE WAR.

SECRETARY of War, Newton D. Baker, was scheduled to speak for Fisk University at Philadelphia. He was unable to be present but sent a letter which said:

In our training camp at Des Moines, representative young colored men presented themselves for training. They devoted themselves with zeal to the task, and they are now imparting to the men under their charge the military lessons which they themselves learned, but more than this, they are teaching to their fellow-men the principles for which America is in this war—those vital principles of democracy which are the foundation of the hopes of free people.

¶ Brig.-Gen. Blanding declares that the 370th Infantry, formerly the Eighth Illinois, "are as fine a set of soldiers as I ever hope to command. Their work along military lines as well as their personal conduct has been beyond reproach. Forty-nine privates and non-commissioned officers have been given commissions.

¶ Forty-one colored cadets from the Tenth Cavalry and Twenty-fourth Infantry will be trained at Camp Stanley, San Antonio, Texas. Thirty other cadets are expected.

¶ Thirty-one colored cadets are among the 934 students of the Officers' Training School opened at Camp Upton, L. I. They are from the 367th Infantry, the 351st Machine Gun Battalion, and other units.

¶ Three or more colored cadets are among those assigned to the Officers' Training School at Camp Grant, Ill.

¶ Forty-eight colored cadets have been selected at Camp Logan, Tex., for training as officers.

¶ At Camp Stewart, Newport News, Va., are the First Separate Maryland Infantry with 150 men and 3 officers. They now form Company I, of the 372d Infantry; the Ninth Separate Battalion of Ohio, with sixteen colored officers, including one Major; the First Separate Battalion of the District of Columbia, with thirteen colored officers; Company L of the Massachusetts Sixth Infantry, which is fully equipped; the colored Separate Company G of Nashville, Tenn., now form Company K of the 372d Infantry, all of whose officers are colored.

¶ At Camp Meade, Maryland, all the non-commissioned officers are colored and have been promoted from the ranks. A commanding officer has said that the colored troops have put the white troops to shame by their splendid spirit. These troops will form the 351st Field Artillery.

¶ There are no colored commissioned officers at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga. There are six colored Y. M. C. A. men and several non-commissioned officers. Only twenty-five per cent of the colored men are illiterate. The officers declare that the colored troops are the most apt men in the camp. Examining and Exemption Boards have sent up numbers of colored men who never should have been passed.

¶ At Camp Funston, Kan., there is a building for colored Catholic soldiers, but open to all men. It has a library and amusements. William H. James is in charge.

¶ Robert A. J. Shaw has been made Judge-Advocate at Camp Logan, Tex., where the former Eighth Illinois is stationed.

¶ One hundred Negroes are in a second Officers' Training Camp opened at San Juan, Porto Rico.

¶ In an examination of thirty-seven men drafted for the Army at Charleston, W. Va., Sherman Green, a colored man, was pronounced physically the best man. The percentage of illiteracy among the colored recruits was less than among the whites.

¶ B. W. Kirk, of Chicago, Ill., has been promoted to a first class mechanic in the U. S. Navy.

¶ John E. Green, military attache to the American Legation, Monrovia, Liberia, has been promoted to Major by the War Department.

¶ In the French Army there are two colored Generals, four Colonels, one hundred and fifty-five Captains, and numerous Lieutenants.

¶ At Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, there are 3,600 colored men. They are divided into nineteen companies. Fifty-five of the line officers are colored. The motto of the camp is "Only one color and that is olive-drab." One hundred picked men were organized into a bayonet class. Sergeant E. G. Roundtree, a colored man, was especially commended for excellent work. The instructor was an English officer.

¶ All of the colored units in the National Guard, including the companies mentioned above, the Fifteenth New York Infantry, now in France, and the former Eighth Illinois Regiment will all be assigned to the Ninety-third Division, which will be a fighting unit like the Ninety-second. It will differ, however, in having several colored field officers in addition to line officers.

☐ Fisk University has in the National Army 1 Major, 1 Adjutant, 5 Captains, 11 First-Lieutenants, 3 Second-Lieutenants, 7 Sergeants, 5 Corporals, 23 Privates, and 5 Y. M. C. A. Secretaries. The total endowment funds amount to $251,087.

☐ Camp Hill is a camp for stevedores and laborers. Three to five regiments are there all the time living in tents. Two regiments—the 301st and 302nd—have been sent to France. No tobacco or sweaters or other comforts have been supplied these men.

INDUSTRY.

THE National League on Urban Conditions among Negroes, in a conference held in New York City, has made these excellent suggestions:

We would ask the American Federation of Labor, in organizing Negroes in the various trades, to include: (1) Skilled as well as unskilled workmen; (2) Northern as well as Southern workmen; (3) Government as well as civilian employees; (4) Women as well as men workers.

We would have Negro labor handled by the American Federation of Labor in the same manner as white labor: (1) When workmen are returning to work after a successful strike; (2) When shops are declared "open" or "closed"; (3) When Union workers apply for jobs.

We would have these assurances pledged not with words only, but by deeds—pledged by an increasing number of examples of groups of Negro workmen given a "square deal."

☐ The United Brothers of Friendship, Houston, Tex., have finished payment on a $50,000 building.

☐ The National Council of Women, which met at Washington, D. C., on motion of Mrs. Mary Church Terrell passed a resolution favoring the opening of all trades and pursuits to colored women. The motion was made after the Resolutions Committee had repeatedly refused to consider it.

☐ Colored men are being employed as section hands on the Southern Pacific Railroad. There is one colored foreman, William H. Payne, at the San Joaquin Station.

☐ Five years ago colored messenger boys in Atlanta, Ga., were replaced by white boys. Thirty Negro boys have now been made messengers, and such white boys as care to are working with them.

☐ Colored women as well as men are being employed in the saw-mill district of North Mobile, Ala. They are being paid $1.25 a day.

MAKE YOUR WILL

A few days after your death and, at a time when your wife is least able to use her good judgment and to consider anything unemotionally, she will receive a check from us—as an evidence of your present forethought and unselfishness. You will not be here to direct her what to do. But in the same way that you are providing for those dark days ahead of her and the children, by insuring your life, you can give her advice and direction now by Making Your Will. Put into writing, clearly and definitely just what you want done to protect the estate which you have labored so hard to accumulate. Simplify your business affairs by telling her all about them and by putting in writing the most perplexing ones. Make the administration of your affairs simple to her. Preserve the estate you have created by directing its disposition, as nearly as it is humanly possible, after your death.

Depend as little as you can on an Executor or an Administrator or a Guardian. Do not leave so much to the discrimination of the Guardian of the future welfare of your loved ones. In New York State alone, over forty-six per cent of the guardians who qualify under the revised laws do not make a proper accounting for the funds entrusted to their care. The same is true in nearly every state. It is more true particularly of colored people.

Many a colored child has been robbed of his inheritance by the improper Administration of its parents' estate, on the part of some white Administrator, Executor, or Guardian. It is frequently said that whenever a wealthy Negro dies all that he has belongs to a white man. Let us help to change this condition. Give your child the start in life that your success entitles him to. Everyone of you men who read this advertisement, if you have not done so, go home and Make Your Will. Consult a good Lawyer about it.

Make your wife your Executor and give her full freedom to carry out your wishes. She will take care of your children, you may be sure. Because her judgment may not be as good as yours, simplify your affairs by putting everything possible in writing and directing her what to do.

Make your Life Insurance payable to her. Do not make your Life Insurance payable to minor children because a Guardian becomes necessary to collect it for those children. But above everything else, Make Your Will, and do it according to the laws of the State in which you live.

STANDARD LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

ATLANTA, GEORGIA

SOUTHERN AID SOCIETY OF VIRGINIA, Inc.

Sells Insurance That Protects

Insurance that covers the whole field of life's emergencies in one policy: Sickness, Accident and Death, and perpetual in payments for disabilities.

Of all investments that of insurance is the safest, because it pays at the crucial moment—it is not subject to the money market or the rise and fall of stocks and bonds; but pays promptly upon the death of each policyholder.

Then why not select the best that is to be had—a policy that pays every week with Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc.? Also owning and operating the Va. Beneficial & Insurance Co., Inc., at Norfolk, Va.

DREW $217.50 SICK BENEFITS and $500.00 DEATH CLAIM

Richmond, Va., July 2, 1917.

To Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that my wife, Mrs. Lelia V. James, 1104 Chaffin Street, was a member of Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc., for six and one-half years. During this time, she was sick on several occasions and whenever she reported her illness to the Society, she received her sick dues promptly. Her last illness extended from the latter part of November, 1916, to June, 1917. The Society sent her money to her bedside each week, from December 6, 1916, to June 6, 1917, and at her death paid over to me the Death Claim of $500.00.

I take pleasure in recommending the Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc., to anyone who wants a sure policy of protection all through life.

Respectfully yours,

GEORGE JAMES, Husband.

CLARENCE JAMES, Witness.

$500.00 DR. THOS. A. STEVENS' DEATH CLAIM

1007 Sixth St., Lynchburg, Va.

Southern Aid Society of Va., Inc.,

Richmond, Va.

February 10, 1917.

Gentlemen:

Kindly accept my sincere thanks for your check of $500.00 in full payment of death claim of my husband, Dr. Thomas A. Stevens, who died February 6, 1917. The above named check was delivered to me Thursday, February 8, 1917, by your superintendent, Mr. R. D. Burton.

I shall always speak in the highest terms of your company, and pray God's blessings upon the work.

Respectfully,

MRS. THOMAS A. STEVENS.

OWN A HOMESTEAD ORCHARD—ESTATE AND BE INDEPENDENT!

Wouldn't you like to own a high grade orchard estate that could be cultivated and taken care of for you WITHOUT ANY EXPENDITURE OF TIME OR EFFORT ON YOUR PART, and that could be made to earn HANDSOME YEARLY PROFITS for a great many years! A place that you could feel MIGHTY PROUD OF, and where you could some day make your future home, should you so desire! A place that would be a REAL ASSET IN EVERY RESPECT, where you know your money would be SAFELY INVESTED and in a way that would earn you LARGE RETURNS! Almost every intelligent, ambitious human being has, at some time or other, had that longing, and we are sure that YOU have had it also

DO YOU REALIZE WHAT THAT MEANS?

It means that if YOU act soon enough and are fortunate enough to secure one of these orchard estates, you will have a place of which YOU will be the SOLE OWNER, and which will earn you handsome yearly returns for perhaps forty or fifty years, WITHOUT REQUIRING A BIT OF TIME OR EFFORT ON YOUR PART! YOU own the land and WE do all the work. The price per acre INCLUDES the cost of ALL the work FOR FOUR YEARS, and after that we can go right on taking care of it for you as long as you want us to, for a small percentage of your profits.

A HOMESTEAD—ORCHARD—ESTATE OFFERS YOU THAT VERY OPPORTUNITY!

It is now possible for a LIMITED NUMBER OF PEOPLE IN EACH CITY to secure a tract of land (one acre or more) in a large, high grade commercial apple orchard, AND HAVE THEIR LAND FULLY DEVELOPED, CULTIVATED AND TAKEN CARE OF BY THIS COMPANY, while the owners stay at home and go right ahead with their business or profession or whatever work they may be doing.

Lack of space here prevents us from publishing all the details of this proposition, but if you are really interested and would like to know all the particulars about Homestead Orchard, what and where it is, the money-making possibilities of a commercial apple orchard, etc., simply fill out and mail us the attached coupon, and all the information will be gladly and promptly sent to you. THE PRICE IS REASONABLE AND THE TERMS ARE EASY.

DON'T FORGET THAT HOMESTEAD ORCHARD WAS FIRST INTRODUCED OVER A YEAR AGO AND THAT A BIG PART OF IT HAS ALREADY BEEN SOLD. MANY PEOPLE MADE SPECIAL TRIPS THERE TO INVESTIGATE EVERYTHING LAST SUMMER, AND THAT IS WHY THE DEMAND IS SO GREAT.

Bear in mind also, that the number of acres in the tract is LIMITED, and NOT NEAR ENOUGH TO SUPPLY THE DEMAND. It is simply a case of FIRST COME—FIRST SERVED. Send for full particulars NOW and make up your mind AFTERWARD.

A New Book by Dr. Du Bois

THE NEGRO

By W. E. BURGHARDT DU BOIS, author of "Souls of Black Folk," "Quest of the Silver Fleece," "Select Bibliography of the Negro American," etc.

This is the authentic romance of the black man. It is a history of him at once scholarly, earnest and eloquent. He is considered from the earliest times, and the thread of his fascinating story is followed in Africa, America, and wherever else it has appeared. To look at the Negro against the background of his history is to see him in a light fairer than that in which most Americans have seen him.
